Up-scaling

Training for self-protection against forest fires in rural areas

In the final phase of the project, each partner has held a half-day scaling-up meeting with a group of specialists in which the final results of the Forest Fire Protection project were reported and the necessary feedback was received from the participants. These meetings were held during the month of July and were very well attended.

Co-funded by the European Union

The Forest Fire Protection project is funded through Erasmus+ KA2 Strategic Partnership.

The project will run for
2 years from January 2022 to December 2023

Surveys

In the last phase of the project, a series of surveys were carried out by each participating country to a group of 40 people who had received training in self-protection and another group of 40 people who had not received any training in this area. This large number of participants has made it possible to reach a large number of people who have taken a very positive interest in the project and its results, finding them very useful for their daily lives in rural or protected environments that may be potentially dangerous in the event of a forest fire.

The results obtained and presented in a report from each country showed the differences between the two groups in terms of their knowledge and their way of acting in the event of a disaster.

Final meeting

The final meeting of the project was held in the Portuguese town of Espinho on 27-28 September 2023.

The meeting reviewed the results obtained in the different countries, presented by the partners in their reports, as well as the pending tasks to be carried out before closing the Forest Fire Protection project. A financial review of the project was also carried out and the quality and dissemination reports of the project were presented in order to check its efficiency and the achievement of the different objectives set out in the project.
